At Partners Group, we have developed an approach that we believe allows us to apply the key strengths of successful industrial groups to private markets. We call it transformational investing. This approach seeks to capitalize on transformational growth trends in order to identify attractive businesses and assets with the potential to be transformed into market leaders in their field. It is built upon two essential pillars: thematic investing and entrepreneurship at scale. Thematic investing is about identifying the most attractive transformative trends across sectors through teams of sector specialists and operators. We aim to identify the companies and assets within each sector of our three overriding investment mega themes, Digitization & Automation, New Living and Decarbonization & Sustainability, that we believe will drive structural change and secular growth in our economies in the decades to come. It is important to look beyond the top layer to identify companies operating in less obvious underlying sub-sectors. The concept of taking a sectoral growth theme and then cascading down through significant underlying trends is a key part of our thematic investing approach. It is applied in the same way across private equity, private infrastructure, and private real estate themes. The second pillar of transformational investing, entrepreneurship at scale, is vital to create and actively manage a governance structure for the companies in a portfolio. Once a business has been acquired, achieving operational excellence is a key goal for each business and the board is charged with driving forward the transformational strategy we have designed for that business to enable it to achieve this goal. We developed our own Private Markets Operator Development Program which aims to hire top talent under the Partners Group brand and rotate that talent across our portfolio companies. By staying close to participants through our mentoring, coaching and training programs, we prepare them for senior roles either at portfolio companies or at Partners Group. For us it is important to establish boards at portfolio companies that are accountable to the private markets group and investors, but have the autonomy needed to be entrepreneurial. To drive value creation, they need to be able to apply their expertise and knowledge of the company and industry in which it operates.
